ChurchMedia.net's 1st Annual Convention!

June 21-23, 2005

St. Louis, Missouri

The Hilton, Frontenac

1335 South Lindbergh Blvd.

A Different Kind of Media Convention:

For the techies, by the techies! Three days of classes focusing on using visual media in the church. The schedule is packed with practical information, both technical and motivational. Most of the classes are taught by those that are actively serving in churches as media ministers. Other teachers include authors Tim Eason, Jason Moore and Greg Zschomler. Each general session will feature worship, keynote speakers and lots of fun (and prizes). Keys to a Successful Media Ministry pays for itself the second you step inside your first class!

Who should attend?

Volunteers who work with PowerPoint, worship software, graphics and video production -- Full-Time Media Ministers (bring your whole team!) -- Music Ministers -- Youth Pastors -- Children's Pastors -- and yes, even Senior Pastors! There is something for everyone. Not all classes are strictly technical. There are many classes that will help with sermon preparation, developing thematic services and more.

How much is the registration fee?

This convention is being organized by ChurchMedia.net and its Professional Members. The speakers and instructors are giving of their time for an offering only. The object of this conference is not to make money, but rather to provide an atmosphere of learning and fellowship. To help cover costs, they have kept the registration cost to $50 per person! That includes all classes and general sessions for all three days. Meals are not included. There are two restaurants in the hotel and many nearby. There will be a Sundae Bar on Tuesday evening that will cost an additional $5 per person.
